CHEF WANTED IN MURDER OF GOTHAM MODISTE

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—A vigilant police watch was Thursday set for Oscar Vogt, a former Swiss soldier, chef and pianist, wanted in connection with the murder of Mrs. Agnes Guth, a fashionable modiste, stabbed to death in her home Wednesday night. A few hours before her body was found, she is known to have had $140 in her possession, but the police were unable to find it.

According to August Guth, 21-year-old son of the slain woman, Vogt and Mrs. Guth were in love. As Mrs. Guth's business was prosperous, Vogt decided to quit working and lead a life of ease.

Mrs. Guth's sons objected to this arrangement and quarrels in the Guth household were frequent. Finally in a burst of anger Vogt said he would leave. Mrs. Guth disappeared late Wednesday afternoon. Vogt gave no indication of alarm at her absence. He played the piano and smoked cigars until time to eat his supper and then he ate a steak with unusual relish. Immediately afterward he disappeared and a few hours later Mrs. Guth's body was found hidden beneath the covers of her bed.
